Pressure for Peace

DRESIDENT JOHNSON FLATLY denied last week that there had been any "serious indications" of a North Vietnamese desire to instigate peace talks last December, although there had been strong rumors that Polish diplomats had made Hanoi's position clear to Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

This week Prime Minister Wilson told Parliament that he had "all the details" of a peace feeler from Hanoi in December and that a "considerable misunderstanding" had resulted in failure to go ahead with preparations for talks. Mr. Wilson would not say what the misunderstanding was, but the result was that 10 days after the North Vietnamese transmitted their proposal to the United States via Poland, American bombers struck for the first time at the central area of Hanoi causing the extensive civilian damage which has riased such consternation among the United States' friends.

It might seem that Mr. Johnson's denial has been undercut by Mr. Wilson's affirmation that North Vietnam did, indeed, make a serious representation for talks. But, of course, this would rest on the definition of "serious." Washington has taken a hard line on what it would consider as pre-conditions for talks and has indicated that it would not consider cessation of American bombing. However, according to apparently reliable reports from London, the North Vietnamese offer was unconditional and Hanoi would have been willing to meet at the ambassadorial level with the United States in Warsaw. However, when the Hanoi raids were started, the offer was withdrawn and Hanoi reportedly told Polish envoys that it as their belief Washington had deliberately sabotaged the hope of

with the Americans, Washington has escalated the war." Perhaps this has been the result of what American historian Prof. Arthur J. Schlesinger Jr., described in a recent book on the Vietnam war as the "American policy of inadvertence" which got his country into the war and keeps it there. The fact remains, however, that on two previous occasions North Vietnam peace offers were followed by escalation.

Both times it was United Nations Secretary General U Thant who negotiated agreements with Hanoi at the request of the late Mr. Adlai Stevenson, then American Ambassador to the UN. The American administration gave as its reason for refusing to meet the North Vietnamese that such an action might have resulted in toppling the precarious military regime in Saigon. Mr. Stevenson died shortly after his peacemaking attempts were thus rebuffed by Washington.

This week, with an uneasy ceasefire in effect in Vietnam during the lunar New Year celebrations, freshi efforts are being made by interested parties to prolong the cease-fire into a permanent truce. Canada's External Affairs Minister Martin, according to Ottawa reports, is privy to a new approach from Hanoi. And Soviet Prime Minister Kosygin, during his visit to London, is undoubtedly discussing the matter with Mr. Wilson. Pope Paul has once again urged American and North and South Vietnamese officials to use the cease-fire as a basis for negotiations to end the war.

Washington will have indicated its position by Saturday, the day the New Year truce ends. Resumption of fighting, particularly the bombing of North Vietnam, will mean that the United States is still determined to push ahead to a goal of total victory, illusory though that may seem to many observers.

DO WE REALLY LACK IT?

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Style-And a Figure to Display It

IT surely cannot be mere coincidence when three eminent experts arrive simultaneously at the same basic conclusions in their depth studies of Canada. Thus the London Times has found that Canadians are a narrow-minded parochial lot. How can they be otherwise since, as the Times notes, their newspapers give them little news of the world, or only about ten times as much as the British people read in their popular press? Professor Robert Mackenzie, of the London School of Economics, recently toured Canada, finds that its habits of self-examination, the national anxiety syndrome, are pathetic. We have simply a great international Finally we have from Mr. Alexander Ross, managing editor of Maclean's Magazine, the shaking discovery that the nation's lack is "style" in its politics and the lack may prove fatal.

Something Terribly Wrong

On this evidence there must be something terribly wrong with us. We shall be lucky, I guess, if Confederation lasts through its hundredth birthday next July. The wise man will visit Expo 67 before the roof falls in under the weight of sheer ennui.

It is not difficult to understand the Times and Professor Mackenzie. As inhabitants of swinging London they must consider any other place pretty dull. But frankly I am baffled by the Ross thesis and so, I imagine, is its central exhibit, Mr. Dalton Camp.

Obviously Mr. Camp has not only high political talents but a subtle streak of humor. If his grave duties permitted, he would like to print and distribute, free, millions of campaign buttons with the slogan "Mackenzie King is dead. Pass it His wry joke would reveal our on." tural backwardness and conservatism which, oddly enough, distresses the chief manager of the Conservative party, but the slogan would be untrue, as Mr. Ross reminds us, because Mackenzie King and his "style" are not dead. That is the real trouble with Canada.

Defiantly Second-Best

"How else," asks Mr. Ross, "would you explain the menopausal mentality that obsesses us?" How else explain that everything Canadian "from our foreign policy to our entertainment is almost defiantly second-best," our government at Ottawa run by "spinsters" in "a city of old women" remote from modern life. Canadians, therefore, are "hungering for a Kennedy-style explosion of idealism and change." It is on the inevitable explosion that Mr. Camp counts to ramove Mr Diefenbaker and rebuild the Conservative party with a completely new style.

All this is most encouraging. One can hardly wait to see the fashions unveiled like the latest gown from Paris and the 1968 car models from Detroit. Meanwhile we may expect nothing of interest from the Pearson government. Spinsters never make styles. They merely make policies.

You like these policies or you don't but inside the queer double-breasted suits at least you can understand them by with their long, antique lapels, always reading the documents and, still more clearly, by reading your tax bill.

As Mr. Ross and Mr. Camp protest, wever, policies good enough for Mr. King and "those frock-coated old horsetraders who fathered Confederation" are quite irrelevant to our supreme Canadian problem, our lack of style. We have no vogue, no taste, no glamour. We are practically naked in the harsh northern

Before we freeze altogether Mr. Ross expects Mr. Camp to dress us in modish raiment, windproof one hopes, but even Mr. Camp has failed, so far, as badly as the styleless spinsters. Indeed, since Maclean's interviewed him, Mr. Camp seems to have suffered weak second thoughts and his backsliding must alarm Mr. Ross.

A Body Needed

The Conservative party, says Mr. Camp, should have actual policies to distinguish it from the Liberal party and the NDP. Style is not enough after all. There must be a figure to display the costume properly. The smartest bikini needs something inside it for electoral sex appeal. Who will pay attention to an empty rag?

Maybe there was something inside the dingy frock coats of the old horse traders, and possibly something, too, worn by Mr. King who never changed his tailor.

At any rate, the horse traders, without any instinct for style, seem to have done all right in designing a nation, such as it is, poor thing. Later on Mr. King designed a new society. All the recent welfare measures and other social reforms are only projections and refinements of his original design which is far more radical than the American design envied by Mr. Ross.

Forgotten Facts

We forget these facts because Mr. King, alas, was style-blind, his reckless heresies hidden under those sombre black garments. But they wore well. And an old-fashioned Canadian may wonder privately whether any foreign design, imitated even from such a fine model as President Kennedy, would fit our peculiar anatomy.

In a prophetic colored photograph Maclean's Magazine pictures next to Mr. Camp a group of ladies wearing gorgeous gowns made, if you can believe it, of paper. Until now Mr. Camp's style has been made of the same material excellent Canadian product, to be climate we require something warmer and more durable, including a Conservative party, buttoned up at last.

Reagan And The U of C

New York Times.

WITH straight face, Ronald Reagan says no "polities or partisanship" entered into the dismissal of Dr. Clark Kerr as president of the University of California. Indeed, he says, the university "is not in the political ring at all" and "won't be sullied by partisan politics" while he is Governor.

Possibly, as has been reported, Governor Reagan had not intended to force the dismissal of Dr. Kerr at last week's meeting of the Regents, but it is indisputable that he had helped generate the political climate in which the dismissal took place.

Governor Reagan is the man who deliberately made the university a key issue in his campaign as long ago as last May, and exploited events on the Berkeley campus as recklessly and relentlessly as he exploited the "white backlash" in race relations.

It was at a rally in San Francisco's Cow Palace on May 13, 1966, that Mr. Reagan called on the California Legislature "to hold public hearings into the charges of Communism and blatant sexual misbehavior" at Berkeley. This is the man who now says he has "no intention of ever trying to overrule' 'the

He based his charges of Communism and immorality at Berkeley and his demand for a public investigation on a report by California's notorious State Senate Committee on Un-American Activities - which he admitted he had

Promised No Cut

He also promised in the speech that he would not cut spending for education or state salaries. But almost his first act as Governor was to propose the drastic slash in appropriations for higher education and the introduction of tuition charges, that precipitated the crisis with

By September, Mr. Reagan was projecting yet another investigation of ms at the university, including that of "unconstitutional political interference." This probe would be headed by John A. McCone, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, he said. Mr. Reagan on that occasion charged "that there has been political interference, which has resulted in the appeasement of campus malcontents and filthy-speech advocates under the pretense of preserving academic freedom."

Evidently alarmed by the public outcry over the sacking of Dr. Kerr, Mr. Reagan has now called off the investigation for the time being. But he can still face 14 television cameras and assert that the great University of California "is not in the political ring at all." It is sure, but perhaps in our sub-Arctic not low comedy on the late show that all of the United States is witnessing here; it is high tragedy whose impact will be felt far beyond the borders of California.

Sound Reasons to Respect Signals

WE have reached a point in Vietnam where there are faint but distinct signals that those chiefly concerned in the fighting have begun to think about negotiating. The signals could not be taken seriously were it not that so many of them contain the same essential element: that they contemplate a peace without victory for either side. The p resident, speaking for the United States in his press conference last week, made quite clear American terms for negotiation were not an unconditional surrender. The signals both from Hanoi and from the Viet Cong. which are not exactly equivalent, suggest conditions for negotiation which are a long way short of a demand for the titional withdrawal of the United States forces from Vietnam.

At this stage both sides are deeply aware that they are running risks. The risk for the United States is that during a cease-fire in both parts of Vietnam, the adversary could use the respite to regroup and reinforce. This risk, how ever, is in some measure offset by the fact that during the respite United States forces too would be reinforced and could strengthen the positions they hold.

Risks Considerable

For Hanoi and for the Viet Cong the risk of a cease-fire is very considerable. The Vietnamese longing for peace is very great, so that once American bombing of North Vietnam and offensives in the south were suspended, it would not be easy for them to revive the will to fight. We run no such corresponding risk. Our forces are largely professional.

For these reasons both sides have to carry on the preliminaries to a negotiation with wariness.

It is sometimes said that the preliminaries ought to be conducted complete secrecy because the public disclosure of the terms under discussion would be carried out is likely to incite all the backseat drivers on both sides. The fact is, however, that in these preliminary stages of bringing a war to an end, absolute secrecy is virtually impossible. In the other three large wars of our century there has always been a preliminary period like the present one in Vietnam. In all of them there has been some kind of public manifestation of the will to negotiate, for only with phases of the war with Japan in 1945, the more powerful belligerent is committed to a demand for unconditional surrender, the signals will be disregarded.

to be opened effectively.

As I read what he said last week, President Johnson has taken an unequivocal stand against a policy of enditional surrender and is in favor of honorable negotiation.

The outlook therefore is not unfavorable. It may indeed be more favorable than we are allowing ourselves to think. once an adversary begins to send up signals, it is not easy for him to reverse himself and resume absolute warfare. only way he could do this readily would be if we chose to treat his signals as a sign of weakness and then hit him taking the signals seriously.

The first is that the convulsion in China has become so enormous and so that are the channels of diplomacy likely violent that the influence of Peking on the Vietnamese war must be declining If, as was the case in the closing precipitously. The influence of Moscow and of the block of Soviet states must be very much greater in Hanoi than it was a few months ago. The Soviet interest is to end the Vietnamese war without loss of face and to remove the largest obstacle to a collaboration with Western Europe and the United States.

Another reason for taking the signals seriously is that neither side has much to gailn from carrying on the war. Hanoi cannot drive the Americans into the sea. The Americans cannot exterminate the Viet Cong.

Thus the balance of forces within Vietnam and the balance of forces in the around it converge on the proposition that a negotiated settlement alone makes sense.

SALISBURY - It appears that the Smith regime has finally decided to go it alone, come what may. It is to continue its defiance of economic sanctions and devise a new independence Constitution, with provisions for "separate development."

Almost certainly this Constitution will have a republican form - the final cutting of British ties. It may well be submitted to the electorate for approval.

This is the general interpretation put on Mr. Smith's defiant speech in which he announced the setting up of a constitutional commission.

Strong Pressure

It may also be assumed that Mr. Smith himself has finally bowed to the strong right-wing pressures in his party. The government is evidently convinced that it can continue to fight sanctions and win, in spite of the ominous warnings of many business groups.

Any intention Mr. Smith had of keeping the door ajar for a resumption of talks with Britain seems to have been abandoned. For a long time the extreme right in Rhodesia has urged him to "slam and lock the door." He has done just that.

It is significant that the Smith regime has withdrawn its cross-appeal against the September High Court judgment which ruled that the regime and its Constitution were illegal and unconstitu-

Nationalist Syndrome

How should right-wing ex-tremism in general, and the National Democratic Party (NPD) in particular, be coun-the comparative success of the National Democrats in last year's elections?

What are the reasons for

Is the NPD really as democratic as it likes to make

To what extent is it infiltrated by other groups, and elements surviving from earlier years?

Is this wave of nationalism a perilous step backwards? Should and could the NPD be banned?

These were the questions that confronted us in the Federal Republic last year, and it seems that we shall be spending 1967 looking for the answers. It is to be feared that the assertion "the NPD is not a factor in Federal Republic politics" will prove little more than a pious hope.

Between Votes

This assertion is contained in a booklet bearing the rather infelicitous title "Na-tional or Radical." The book actually appeared between the Hesse and Bavarian state elections—that is in the inter-val separating the NPD's two c o m paratively insignificant but exceedingly spectacular election successes.

However, it would be wrong However, it would be wrong to conclude from this that the booklet is already out of date. The very contrary is the case. The urgency of our coming to terms with right-wing extremism, and thus with the NPD, has if anything become even more pressing.

even more pressing.
The NDP weekly Deutsche Nachrichten had this to say: "This book is not worth the paper it is printed on." This is manifestly false. The book's answers to all the questions raised above are often useful, sometimes brilliant. It is anvaluable aid in any att to comprehend the right-wing radicalism syndrome.

This applies particularly to the third contribution, "Towards a rationale of right-wing radicalism," whose author, Wolfgang Gotz, is director of the Rhineland-Palatinate institute of civics.

Authoritarian

Gotz contends that it is not just a question of organized right-wing extremism, but "the greater long-term danger may well be the basic sym-pathy with authoritarian and anti-democratic thinking ious allies by giving Ger-many's concessions in China to Japan, During the "Hundred Flowers" campaign in 1956, when Chinese intellectuals were encouraged to criticize and "contend," university which is encountered in a great number of Germans who otherwise repudiate or-ganized right-wing extremand "contend," university walls once more blossomed bulletins, this time attacking

He warns against the error "simply equating modern right-wing extremism, and in particular the NPD, with a reincarnation of national so-cialism." But he also warns the democratic parties not to disregard lightly the current dissatisfaction of many people with the workings of the ntary and democratic party system.

Gotz sees an objectivelybased system of political education as the most effective weapon against exaggerated nationalism and rabid vinism. He remarks that rightwing extremism "does not tempt the criticial and well-informed citizen. Only those people who are politically unaware or devoid of critical judgment are liable to fall prey to it."

The other two contributions in the book are no less the department concerned with right-wing extremism in the Federal office for the defence of the constitution, offers a section entitled "The criminology of anti-Semitic and Nazi excesses."

Heinrich Sippel, an adviser in the Federal ministry of the interior, discusses "Propa-ganda themes of right-wing radicalism," and he laces his radicalism, and he laces his argument with a host of quite hair-raising quotations. It is striking to note how easily sentiments appropriated from the NPD are incorporated in the utterances of some other,

Another Tecent book, "Na Anionest Extremism," by M. Rainer Lepsius, is definitely to be recommended as a valuable elucidation of the whole complex problem of nationalism.

Professor Lepsius, a Mann-heim sociologist, sets out to "construct a few hypotheses on the correlation of national ism to social structure." To this end he investigates the relative susceptibility of certain sectors of the population (middle classes, peasants, workers, catholics) to the extreme nationalism preached by the nazi party prior to

Climate, Physical Barriers Limit Snakes on Island

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL

For various reasons there are more kinds of snakes on the mainland of British Columbia than on Vancouver Island. Whereas only three known for the Island there are seven elsewhere. This is largely because the mainland offers more variety in habitat, ranging from the dry, desert-like country of the interior valleys to the damp, cool zones of the coast. There is thus a fairly wide choice of environments correlated with climate which in turn is affected by latitude and altitude. affected by latitude and altitude.

Another factor — physical barriers — may have also played a part in determining the distribution of some of the animals. Mountains, rivers and particularly straits of the sea may have blocked the natural spread in some instances. In any case certain snakes are confined to the dry inland portions of the province and it is doubtful if some of these would thrive on Vancouver leand over the would thrive on Vancouver Island even if transported here and given protection. In addition to the ubiquitous garter snakes there are three kinds which seem to be particularly well adapted for life in dry regions. These are the rattlesnake, the blue racer and the gopher snake which are found throughout the Okanagan Valley and in other parts with a similar climate.

Of these perhaps the rattlesnake is the best known. Because it is our only venomous reptile it has received more attention than the others though it is by no means abundant. It is quite widely spread, north as far as Kamloops, west to Lytton and east to Cascade. Within this range it is most likely to be seen at the base of a rock slide or in open sagebrush country near rocks and other shelter where it hunts for small rodents before or after the heat of the day. Rattlesnakes longer than four feet are seen nowadays, though six foot individuals have been reported.

given warning it will slither away often without being seen by the interloper. Only when cornered or suddenly surprised will it attempt to bite. Usually it rattles first, not to warn of an impending attack but apparently to help prevent the snake from being accidently trodden on by larger animals. It seems the rattle is designed to protect the reptile from possible harm not as an alarm aimed at the The racer one of the whip-snakes has a long slender body ending in a thin tail. It gives the illusion of moving very rapidly. Actually it probably doesn't travel faster than any other of our more agile snakes but it is hard to catch. The racer, however climbs with ease and consequently it is occasionally seen gliding through shrubbery some distance above ground where it seeks out birds' eggs and young in the nest. Insects, mice and frogs are also eaten when available. This snake is easily recognized by its whip-like shape and its uniform color which may be greyish-green, olive, or yellow-brown usually changing to blue on the sides.

snake, is a much stouter and larger reptile, reported sometimes to be six feet long though most are under four feet. It resembles the rattler somewhat in having a series of dark blotches on the back and smaller spots on the sides. However, it lacks the rattle and the broad head of the venomous rattler.

The least-known snake of the mainland is the rubber boa, an inoffensive little fellow that is seldom seen. The boa is easily recognized; it has a short stout body seldom more than two feet long including a blunt tail and the color is a uniform greyish or yellowish brown with light yellow underneath. Its movements are slow and deliberate and it never attempts to bite when picked up.

Huge capital investments planned for Canada have been held back by foreign investors since Walter Gordon was returned to the federal cabinet, Highways Minister Gaglardi claimed Wednesday in the legislature.

Since the Liberal party resurrected Gordon there have been hundreds of millions of dollars of investment money that has not been invested in Canada," he said.

OTTAWA (UPI) - Defence minister Paul Hellyer denied Tuesday the United States was Canadian coastal waters.

The defence minister told reporters the visit of the U.S. nuclear submarine Starfish to St. John's, Newfoundland, Feb. 6, had "nothing whatsoever to do with surveillance."

Hellyer said the missile-carrying sub had received permission from the Canadian government to discharge a crew-membe suffering from "non-nuclear" injuries.

PERMISSION GIVEN

He said the vessel had received permission prior to entering the east-coast harbor. Earlier, Hellyer was asked by former Tory defence chief Gordon Churchill if the visit by a nuclear sub to a Canadian port "was part of the handing over of surveillance of Canadian waters to the U.S. forces."

The question was asked dur ing the daily question period in the House of Commons.

House Speaker Lucier Lamoureux threw the question out and thwarted attempts by Hellyer to answer similar quesby other Conservative

They're not being difficult. It's simply that the understandable tax form cannot be done without some figures from you.

This is the information your employees need on their T4 slips: their total earnings, the total income tax withheld during the year, their contribution to pension plans, taxable benefits, and commissions earned in addition to salary.

And don't forget to list their SIN or Social Insurance Number. They will be matching this to the number on their Personalized Tax Return and the number on their SIN card.

We've told employees all over the country that their employers are responsible for this information. They need it to make out their tax returns correctly and to keep an accurate record of their Canada Pension Plan contributions.

We've let them know it is a legal requirement for you to supply it.

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

A day with Frank Mario:

7:40 a.m.: I intended to start at his motel. I wanted to see how a hockey coach responded when the alarm went off. Would he be a little extra nervous on a game day? Was he one of those people who burst out of the blankets and hitting the cold shower let loose with a few bars of "Oh, It's Great to Get Up In the Morning?" In the Morring?"

But before I got that far he said he usually took breakfast in

"Meet me there about a quarter to eight," he said.
He was sitting on a stool, looking a lot fresher than I felt.
He wore a striped, tab-collar shirt, soft blue and brown striped the (I flunked the driver's licence color blind test sayif the shades don't blend it's probably my description), a subdued tartan jacket and charcoal slacks.

He is dapper without being estentations. The only thing you notice out of the ordinary is the ring on his fourth finger, left hand. It is a menster with a blue stone mounted high. Around the stone is engraved "Victoria Maple Leafs, WHL Champions, He hadn't started into his orange juice, coffee or buttered brown toast. He held a cigarette (he's not a chain smoker but he's working on it) and was studying the newspaper.

"How do you like that Vancouver team?" he asked. "Six in a row on the road. Beat San Diego in overtime. Winning goal came when (Jim) Watson was skating behind the net and fell down. (Boh) Jones was there and he popped it." Mario shook his head. "Wouldn't happen once in 10,000 times," he said. I said it was strange how the Canucks could do so well on a long road trip while other teams couldn't.

"They had a little break," he said, pulling a schedule out of his pocket. "See they didn't play back to back games. You'd be surprised how much a night off helps."

Like Cranks, He Works FOR Someone

I asked if he always woke up so early and he said, no, he tsually didn't get up until about 8. He stops for coffee before going to practice and has breakfast later. But today he had a few things to do at the office and a team meeting at 11.

What kind of things at the office? "Well, I go over the charts. We see who went well against certain teams. Then I look at the mail, answer some letters and go to the meeting." Did he put much faith in charts? "Not too much. A player can give you a good game yet not pick up points. It's a guide."

He called the waitress for more coffee (he had three cups in all). I asked if he received crank letters. "No. Oh, one or two last year when Toronto sent (Milan) Marcetta and Freddy (Hucul) to Tulsa. They got on me for not stopping Imlach

Did he reply to them?
"Yes. I wrote that I work for Toronto." He stressed the

What happens at the team meeting?

Barn Could Burn But No Entry Here

Mario asked if Houle had heard from Imlach. Houle said yes, Imlach had phoned Tuesday afternoon. Houle said Imlach chided him for "letting me down Sunday."

"Punch said Toronto had lost, Rochester had lost, Tulsa had lost and the Mariboros had lost, but he knew we would prevent a cleen sweep." All those clubs belong to Toronto and so does Victoria. But Portland had made the sweep clean, winning 5.3

Houle ordered three coffees to go. 9:10: Mario went right to his desk and thumbed through the charts. He made a phone call, dropped in to talk to Houle, went back to his desk and looked at the charts again while Houle carefully put two tickets in separate envelopes and wrote the name of each Leaf on them.

Mario came back into Houle's office, asked if he could have a few minutes alone with Houle. "I've got some business to 11:35: Mario came back into his office. He's generally so involved you can't tell whether he's happy or otherwise. Good

Cottage Cheese Easier on Waistline

A radio announcer phoned and wante one directly. But after two people walked into the office and he realized the conversation on tape would probably be scrambled, he said Then he put the phone down and said, "Let's have lunch."

12:40: He ordered braised short ribs "but no potatoes — bring me some cottage cheese" and coffee. His fifth cup. Why no potatoes?

"My weight," he said. I told him he didn't look fat.
"I'm not. Only 175. But I want to stay that way." He said he weighed about 163 when he played "and you're entitled to a pound a year, aren't you, when you quit?"

passed dessert and said he was sorry, but he had to leave. He had arranged to talk to a player. "Nothing serious. I've had two or three talks and he's come along well after them." He said he would come back to his ciffice later, leave about 3:30 and go back to his room and p.m.: He arrived at the rink, dapper in blue suit, white blue tie. After visiting the dressing room he came out and said the boys were in good spirits.

Throughout the first two periods his expression didn't change much even as Seattle went ahead 3-1. But he died a few thousand deaths in the third period when Victoria outs Seattle 29-11 (hat's shots taken, blocked and missed). He looked at the clock often to make sure his involvement in the game wouldn't cause him to have a line on the ice too long.

Some Forget Coaches Have Feelings

10:32: The Leafs had lost 3-2 and now Mario was walking the soles off his feat in the trainer's room. He takes defeat as hard as any coach in the league. But unlike some, known as "front runners" because they'll talk to you when they win and skip post game tete-a-tetes when they lose, he's polite.

He had written "practice 10 a.m. Thursday" on the blackboard, just beyond where the players' longjohns hang from a overhead rack. Now he walked, head down, deep in his own thoughts, to the office, He talked briefly with Houle. When he came out he said "Sometimes after a game I have something to eat or just go back to the motel." He suggested

The daschunds I told you about yesterday are up for adoption at the SPCA Animal Shelter because, perversely, they refused to breed. Our dog population being what it that can hardly be considered a crime.

But among the dogs in the pound section are those whose records predoom them.

There, black as sin but grinning amiably, sits a Ger-man Shepherd whose dossier carries the floors. Dogs curably vicious by human abuse have even less chance. These are the outcasts and outlaws of dogdom, and their presence behind the wire contributes to the problems of the shelter staff. Emotionalism would spare even the intractable biter. Practicality demands firmer measures. Eventually, Mr. Beeching believes, we will have to match the dog to his new environment of heavy traffic, close-packed suburbs and vertical housing. He is im-pressed by Netherlands prac-tice in this respect.

There, the would-be dog owner must apply for a purchase permit. He is also required to put his pet through state-approved

Last year, 1,296 dogs passed through the adop-tion centre, of which 791 went out to new homes. Counting 106 from Langford and Col-106 from Langford and Col-wood, 1,361 strays were fetched to the pound section during the same period. Of these, $47 were claimed. And the rest? The lucky "crossed over" to swell the adoption tally. For the luckless, the bolt-pistol or the electrodes clamped to each furry ear.

That sad necessity apart, Dave Beeching and his inspectors are happy in their work with animal unfortunates.

This wek, they took in a wild duck which had knocked itself silly by flying into a Memorial Arens wall. In a few days, it will be released among its own kind in Beacon

A while back, they permitted a moneyless boy who turned up with his father to earn the adoption fee (which is highly elastic) by working Saturday mornings at the shelter. He got his dog ... and the chum who came along to help him still checks in to help him still checks in kennel hand.

Reacons are frequent guests.

Racoons are frequent guests.

Says Dave Beeching, "Big, husky policemen who would tackle any thug quail before the little housewife who won't have that racoon up her tree shot. They call us in, we box-trap the coon and turn it loose in wild country."

Rabbits tend to be retreads: the same bunny, in its life-time, will leave the adoption centre half a dozen times in a new pair of eager young

Reindeer? Here's Inspector Oscar Vennberg, who as a boy in Sweden helped his father thend 200 of the beasts. He knows they should be driven with a single rein, and that their milk makes a golden cheese much better than cream when pared into coffee.

At the shelter, they have learned to watch out for the creep who seeks a dog to use in some ill-conceived practical joke. They are also aware that the occasional "stray" found miles from its home was stolen in hopes of a reward and turned loose when none was advertised.

However, they are convinced that we're free of "dognapping" for purposes of scientific research. University of Victoria, Mr. Beeching tells me, buys two dogs a year from UBC for this purpose. But no SPCA branch releases pets for experimentation.

In their double capacity, the shelter people save where they can and destroy when they must.

Among the saved, you may number the wistful little collieshepherd cross they've named "Lucky." He's the dog whom two young good Samaritans rescued from the Island Highway shoulder near Koksilah a couple of weekends back.

Lucky, today, is recovering from a kidney ailment and a broken tail. When I took my leave of him, he was about to try conclusions with a large, meaty bone.

Shoo That Ugly Stain From Cup Into Drain

By Penny Saver

Have you taken a close look at your set of plastic dinnerware carefully. Tell them that you explain the other day and I was literally thereone. Have you taken a close look at your set of plastic dinnerware lately? I checked mine the other day and I was literally thrown into a state of panic when I saw the coffee stains inside the cups and saucers. They looked a disgrace? I was just about tempted to hide these battle-scarred pieces in a remote section of the cupboard until I remembered the special cleaner that I found. As quick as a wink, I had the ugly stains down the drain where they belong. I was just in time too, as a couple of friends dropped in for coffee and a chat as soon as I had dried and replaced the spotless items.

Watch Out for (Beep-Beep) In Your Family Background

Be prepared for shocks if you dig back into your family history.

It may be highly respectable for several generations then — bump — you may well run into illegitimate births.

"Many families are so shocked by what we find they are discouraged from going back any further," says Dr. Conrad Swan, an officer of the College of Arms in London, England, who is now visiting directs research into family histories undertaken by the College of Arms. He also advises individuals and cor-porations on the registration of coats of arms.

"Most family histories," he says, "are a mixture of the grand, the humble and a good deal of the mediocre. But the further back they go, the more likely they are to reveal illegitimacies.

"It often takes a well-developed historical sense to accept the finding of two or three generations of bastardy."

Born and raised at Duncan, Dr. Swan is a professor of history who joined the royal household of Queen Elizabeth in 1962. He bears the awesome title of Rouge Dragon Pursuivant of Arms, and in this capacity was received by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes at Government House

Wednesday. He is a leading participant In royal ceremonials such as coronations, state funerals, royal weddings and baptisms and the introduction of new peers into the House of Lords. But most of his working hours are taken up with researches by the historic College of Arms, established in London in 1555.

Americans are particularly interested in their family dians have a similar ten-dency. This was indicated last year when the Heraldry Society of Canada was formed

"The greatest interest is shown by French Canadians, largely because of the enor-mous fund of family and parish records to be found in Quebec."

Dr. Swan said individual requests for probes into family histories are often prompted by snobbery or a desire for prestige.

"But those who want their genealogy traced for snobbish reasons are often discouraged by the cost, or because they cannot stomach the bad with the good.

"We usually suggest that the individual put what he wants to spend on account; then, when we have reached a significant stage in our investigations, or the money is running low, we contact him for further instructions."

How far back can the College of Arms trace a family history?

Dr. Swan says many re-searches run out at the time of the Industrial Revolution in the early 19th century because there was so much moving and mixing of families.

If the research gets by that stumbling block, the next is the time of Oliver Cromwell, who placed the keeping of laymen instead of the clergy. Many of these laymen were illiterate and the records suffered in consequence. Before Cromwell, most genealogies end with the reign of King Henry VIII, for it was he who first ordered the recording of baptisms, marriages and burials. With a wry touch of humor Dr. Swan said many family coats-of-arms designed by amateurs contain symbols which stand for family

How did a Vancouver Island man become Rouge Dragon Pursuivant of Arms to Queen Elizabeth II?

Dr. Swan was recommended for the position because of his reputation as a historian.
After schooling at Queen.
Margaret's School, Duncan,
he went to England in 1937
and entered Cambridge Uni-

After receiving his doctorate in history, he returned to Canada and was lecturer in political science at the University of Windsor, Ont., from 1955 to 1960.

On a three-month lecture tour of Canada and the United States, Dr. Swan is staying with his cousin, Archibald J. Greene and Mrs. Greene, at 1958 Hawes Road, Victoria. He will also visit his grand-father, 92-year-old Alfred E. Greene, at Duncan.

SECHELT (CP)—Capt. James Gibson, chief dispatcher for Rivtow Marine, Ltd., said Wednesday his company's tug Gulf Master was returning to Vancouver with radar and mechanical trouble when it sank off Sechelt, January 11, with the loss of five lives.

He was testifying before a six-man coroner's jury at Seehelt, 35 miles northwest of Vancouver. The jury ruled the vessel's first mate Rodney Edward Seymour died from drowning and exposure. No blame was attached.

As indoor seed sowing gets since peat moss is usually under way, and all kinds of added in quantity to supply small plants need to be potted humus, and top dressings are on or put into applied, at intervals during small cans, a few hints on soil mixtures may be useful.

Most of us realize that soil straight from the garden is usually in too rough a condirough a condi-tion for the small roots of Hilda pot plants. Young seedlings too, require something considerably finer and more easily penetrable.

We read of screened soil. But what exactly does this phrase mean?

At some time in our lives, we have watched soil being thrown against a wire screen on a frame as big as a bedspring. A small amount of the fine material goes through the holes and a large amount of coarse material falls to the foot of the screen.

Eartha Kitt Charged

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sultry singer Eartha Kitt, jailed Tuesday for failing to heed police orders to move away from a fatally stricken man, said Wed-nesday she will forego a performance in Indianapolis next month to fight the charge. Miss Kitt contended police made no effort to confirm the man was dead and she wanted to use her nursing training to try to revive him. Police arrested her for "failing to move on."

It doesn't take a clairvoyant to predict the good citizens of Yellowknife, NWT, will soon be recipients of

A strong case was made for them by Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing in a letter to the Board of Broadcast Governors last week. In his letter, Mr. Laing urged the extension of television service "as soon as possible."

"Television will bring many practical advantages to northern communities," he stated. "It will be a major factor in attracting fami-lies to live in areas where there is little entertainment possibilities, and where the climate and surroundings are sometimes harsh."

The CBC hopes to have the experimental station at Yellowknife and another at Lynn Lake, Manitoba, in operation by this summer. If these experiments are successful, it is understood that the CBC intends to be establish additional stations in the north within the next two to three years.

The selection of communities which would get these additional stations will be made by the CBC in consultation with the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. The application indicates that CBC engineers have

There's Fewer Cubs But More Badges

Fewer wolf cubs won more badges in Greater Victoria in

That is one of many facts that is to be adduced from an annual report of the Boy Scouts of Greater Victoria Region, a 27-page account of membership and budget figures, awards and reports of individual commissioners issued today.

The report says that there were only 2,316 wolf cubs enrolled in the region, 74 fewer than the figure for 1965, who together earned 6,336 badges, almost 2,000 more than the previous year.

The regional council spent $36,766 — $19,275 for salaries — in 1966 or $509 less than their revenue.

The Community Chest granted the bulk of the scouts' operating fund — $30,316.

The report shows a ratio of pares with one in ten for 1964. There are 94 cub packs, 60 scout troops and six Rover scout crews in the region.

QUEEN'S SCOUT Forty-six scouts earned Queen's Scout honors in 1966. The report shows only 27 Queen's Scouts in 1965.

Use of the Region's outdoor Camp Barnard near Sooke increased by more than 700 camper-days over the year, the report shows.

A total of 1,726 boys spent 5,409 days at the camp in

Other highlights of the scouting year were participa-tion in the Centennial Procla-mation ceremony at Memorial Arena, last summer's pro-vincial jamboree at Penticton, CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and corn led a moderate advance in grain futures prices on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Soybeans, however, were weak in all deliveries. All the deliveries except the nearby March set sessonal lows.

Wheat was weak at the start of the session, but turned firm on a report by Radio Free Europe that continuing dry weather in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe had placed the wheat crop there in jeopardy. Wheat crop the jeopardy. Wheat crop the jeopardy in jeopardy. John jeopardy in j WEDNESDAY Asked

The daschunds I told you about yesterday are SPCA Animal Shelter berause, perversely, they refused to breed. Our dog population being what it is, that can hardly be considered a crime.

But among the dogs in the pound section are those whose records predoom them.

There, black as sin grinning amiably, sits a Ger-man Shepherd whose dossier carries. the curably vicious by human abuse have even less chance. These are the outcasts and butlaws of dogdom, and their presence behind the wire contributes to the problems of the shelter staff. Emotional-ism would spare even the intractable biter. Practicality demands firmer measures. Eventually, Mr. Beeching believes, we will have to match the dog to his new environment of heavy traffic, close-packed suburbs and vertical housing. He is im-pressed by Netherlands practic in this respect.

There, the would-be dog owner must apply for a purchase permit. He is also required to put his pet through state-approved

Last year, 1,296 dogs passed through the adop-tion centre, of which 791 went to new homes. Counting from Langford and Colwood, 1,361 strays were fetched to the pound section during the same period. Of these, 847 were claimed. And the rest? The lucky "crossed over" to swell the adoption tally. For the luckdess, the bolt-pistol or the electrodes clamped to each furry ear.

That sad necessity apart, Dave Beeching and his inspectors are happy in their work with animal unfortunates.

This wek, they took in a wild duck which had knocked itself silly by flying into a Memorial Arena wall. In a few days, it will be released among its own kind in Beacon Hill Park.

A while back, they permitted a moneyless boy who turned up with his father to earn the adoption fee (which is highly elastic) by working Saturday mornings at the shelter. He got his dog ... and the chum who came along to help him still checks in each weekend as a volunteer kennel hand.

Reindeer? Here's Inspector Oscar Vennberg, who as a boy in Sweden helped his father tend 200 of the beasts. He knows they should be driven with a single rein, and that their milk makes a golden cheese much better than cream when pared into coffee.

At the shelter, they have learned to watch out for the creep who seeks a dog to use in some ill-conceived practical in some ill-conceived practical joke. They are also aware that the occasional "stray" found miles from its home was stolen in hopes of a reward and turned loose when none was advertised.

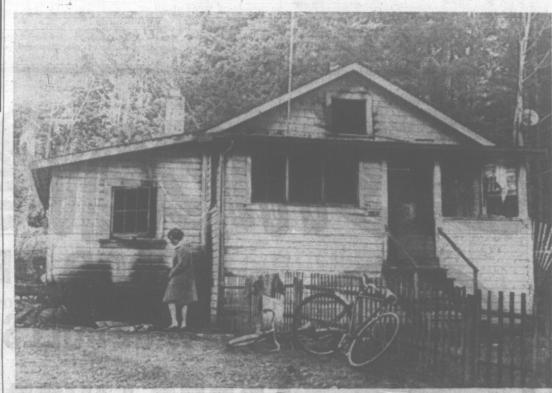

However, they are con-vinced that we're free of "dognapping" for purposes of scientific research. University of Victoria, Mr. Beeching me, buy two dogs a year from UBC for this purpose. But no SPCA branch releases pets for

Pilots Safe After Ditching

A search was begun off Sidney today for a light plane which pancaked into the sea while coming in to land late Wednesday.

Heading the search were the two pilots who had to jump for their lives as the plane began to sink seconds after ditching.

Tom Stockdill, 23, of 3335
Uplands, and Paul Stenner, 24, of 1512 Beach, were plucked from the wafer by fishermen and escaped uninjured.

The two were returning from a trip to Porland in their jointowned Harvard Mark IV at the time of the accident.

TRUCE IS ON

TRUCE IS ON

The Lunar New Year truce in Vietnam now is on its second day. The United States and South Vietnam an announced weeks ago they would stop fighting for four days.

Subsequently the Communists called for a seven - day ceasefire and the anti-Communist allies responded with a proposal for talks about the conditions of a prolonged suspension of hostilities.

Two possibilities for a truce extension appear to be open. One is that the U.S. and South Vietnam could extend it for the additional three days proposed by the Communist side even without agreeing on terms and conditions with enemy representatives.

The second possibility is that th
